

The Patriot Act

and

Homeland Security

Thursday, November 20

7:30 PM

Clary Theater, Georgia Tech

The Patriot Act allows such powers as secret searches and the monitoring of medical and financial records. Federal officials claim these are necessary for homeland security.

This event features a rare debate between a supporter and a critic of the Act:

- Bob Barr, former US Congressman
- Randy Chartash, Assistant US Attorney, US Department of Justice

They will take questions from a distinguished panel consisting of:

- Jabari Simama, Atlanta Mayor's Office of Community Technology
- Ann Woolner, Bloomberg News
- John Sugg, Creative Loafing

The event is free and open to the public. The Clary Theater is located in the Student Success Center, in the west side of the Georgia Tech stadium, by Tech Tower.

This event is sponsored by:

- The Georgia Tech School of Public Policy

in partnership with

- The Atlanta Press Club
- The Georgia Electronic Commerce Association (GECA)

For more information see the IP3 website.

IP3

The Internet and Public Policy Project

School of Public Policy @ Georgia Tech
www.IP3.gatech.edu